When you see something like this on your screen during a dive you should get your camera back to the surface as soon as possible.

On a dive on Lighthouse Reef in Dahab, Egypt, my Minolta Dimage showed some really strange behaviour as you can see. Back on the surface I noticed the housing was wet inside!! So I got everything out and left it to dry. Hopefully the silicagel packages, that I had inside the housing helped to prevent worse. Luckily it seems, that the camera will come back to life after on night drying..... We'll see.....
