Why use a harpoon...when you can use a canon?

Contributed by Gunnar
Last Updated Saturday, 09 February 2008

You might have noticed this title in the SCUBA News box already. Geenpaece just started an email campaign concerning whaling in the Southern Ocean.

Geenpaece just started an email campaign to request the management of Canon, one of the worlds major digital camera manufacturers and sponsor of wildlife initiatives, environmental groups and efforts to save endangered species, to express Canon’s disapproval of whaling in the Southern Ocean, and to call upon the government of Japan to use only non-lethal research methods. You can join the campaign by clicking the link in the SCUBA News box or visit Greenpaece directly by using this link.